

Universal Publishing Production Music offers composers advanced tools with Music Gateway's Private Network Solution

UNIVERSAL PUBLISHING PRODUCTION MUSIC

United Kingdom, May 18th 2016: Universal Publishing Production Music (UPPM), the world's leading music production company, is bringing its composers advanced tools through a new relationship with Music Gateway, a B2B platform designed to allow creative and music industry professionals to work together in a global capacity.

All UPPM composers of production music worldwide will now be able to access Music Gateway's Private Network Solution, a niche project management tool built specifically for the music industry and the creative process between producers and composers submitting their music for review. Since developing Private Network Solution in December 2014, Music Gateway has been working closely with UPPM to customize the service to create the most advanced system to support UPPM composers' needs. With a customisable set up, the solution works for record labels, publishers, music supervisors and education, all of whom securely manage sync briefs, A&R projects and various creative processes. In order to provide UPPM composers with the highest level of security, the website also includes SSL encryption and is independently verified as cyber secure.

Gary Gross, Worldwide President of UPPM, said: "Centralizing the way our music is curated and managed along the production process brings us significant organizational efficiency. It also allows us to share our global pool of composers across the creative territories and redirect valuable resource back to serving our clients. Through the use of Music Gateway's solution there is a clearer communication and a greater collaboration across the management teams."
